

balanced solutions.

Members,

Political battles are won and lost with votes. Our elected leaders determine the fate of legislation and regulations that have a tremendous impact on the future of the home building industry in New Jersey.

Regulatory battles require influence. Policies that impact the availability and affordability of housing impact every business in the industry. Jobs are affected. As well, they have a tremendous ripple effect on surrounding businesses in our communities.

If your livelihood depends on new homes being built and existing homes remodeled or maintained then it is vitally important to be knowledgeable on the public affairs efforts of the residential construction industry in New Jersey.

The South Jersey Builders Political Action Committee cannot do all the work alone. It needs the participation of people who understand our industry's efforts to provide homes for residents. Its guidance helps members strengthen their business practices through their participation in the South Jersey BPAC. You have a voice.

For more than 70 years, we have been the source of housing industry expertise for our members, elected leaders and residents. We have represented your business interests on state and national affairs. We challenged the tough regulatory fights, taking some issues all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court. We championed the right of people to have a safe and healthful place to call home. We've seen generations grow.

As residents of southern New Jersey, we are constantly involved in our communities, always seeking worthy civic and charitable efforts. We help people live the life they want to live tomorrow. None of that happens, however, unless we get involved first.

Sincerely,
Winfield Ziegenfuss
